New Zealand Antique & Historical Arms Association Inc. # 51 March 2015

EDITORIAL

Northland Branch still have a few copies of LEC 88 available for sale, if you have not ordered your copy yet, do so soon before they are all gone.

I am running low on articles for the printed Gazette, so if you have one already written or formulating in your head I would be pleased to hear from you. Ideally they should be typed in a word document with images sent separately, with a list of captions. Anything from 1 to 4 pages of A 4 is good.

I still have some of John Osborne's books to give away to those who send in interesting and original WW I photos.

Please send me dates and adverts for your 2015 events, if you have not done so already.

If your Branch organises an event such as a gun show, please send me some photos for the e-Gazette.

My thanks to all our contributors.

Best wishes,
Phil

FROM THE GUN ROOM

Gurtfuller 16 by Andrew Edgcombe

Long before the introduction of disposable cloth ammunition belts which surfaced during the interwar period machine gun crews of all nations had to spend a good deal of their time loading belts using an array of belt loading contraptions designed to make the job less arduous (each MG08 for example was issued with 16 empty cloth belts). Logistically it was easier to send bulk crated ammunition to the front and issues with the storage of loaded cloth belts was also a factor as belts that became damp and dirty could shrink causing extraction or fouling issues. The machine pictured here is the German "Gurtfuller 16" (model 1916 belt filler) which was introduced from 1916; one Gurtfuller 16 was issued with each MG08 and 08/15. In typical Germanic style these are quite an engineering masterpiece, beautifully designed and manufactured, supplied in a superbly made fitted wooden case "Kasten Fur Gurtfuller 16" (chest for 1916 belt filling machine) along with spare parts and accessories to keep the Gurtfuller running smoothly and efficiently.

Gurtfuller 16 with 250 round cloth belt, belt pocket stretcher, un-loader attachment, spare gear, spare spring and wall mounting bracket.

The Gurtfuller was either mounted to a wall suspended on a bracket or clamped to a table or the wheel of the ammunition cart for loading, an empty belt was fed in from the left side, reinforced holes in the belt engaging the studs on the drum, loose ammunition was placed in the hopper and loading could commence. The handle (missing from this example) was pulled out which pushes a spreader into the cartridge pocket of the belt then turned to the right which turns the spreader, the handle is then turned back to the left and so the cartridge rammer is aligned with the round at the base of the hopper and then pushed home to load the round completing the cycle. Each and every round loaded requires the handle to be pulled, turned and pushed to open the belt pocket load and index the next round. Still a laborious task but better than loading the belts by hand. A complete set would also contain a gauge to measure the seating of the cartridge in the belt, working off the same holes in the belt that the Gurtfuller drum indexes as correct seating is critical for the feed mechanism of the MG08 and 08/15 Machine Gun. A double ended pick was also included that could be used to open up any pockets in the belt that had been stitched closed or help free up any jams in the machine. In addition to the belt pocket spreader that is integral to the Gurtfuller the cartridge pusher could be replaced with a tool to stretch the cartridge belt pockets of particularly tight belts, the belts would be run through the machine and stretched then loaded afterwards. Another accessory could be fitted to convert the loader to an un-loader, quite a versatile machine indeed! All parts and accessories are serial numbered to the loader.

Positioned ready to strip round from hopper and push forward into belt

Eleven different manufacturers are known to have produced Gurtfullers during the First World War, this example was made by Fortuna Werke, Cannstadt.

Others were as follows:

- DWM, Berlin
- Herman Gradewitz, Berlin
- F.F.A. Schulze, Berlin
- Paul Biel, Berlin
- Fredrich Keese
- Union Bochum
- Brann and Wolff, Berlin
- R.Pfister AG, Oberschonsweide
- Roth & Muller, Stuttgart
- Furstlich Lippische Staatswerken,AG

If anyone has a spare handle I'm looking for one! Even the loan of a handle so it can be copied would be an immense help or any other Gurtfullers or accessories.

NELSON BRANCH AWARDS TWO PERHAM MEDALS

At our Christmas function Nelson Branch had the pleasure of presenting two Perham Medallions to two deserving and long standing members.

Jim Peter has been involved at all levels of Branch activities almost from the very beginning, filling at one time or another almost every position within the Branch and more recently as Branch Auctioneer from which he has only just retired.

Trevor McLean has been for many years the "King-pin" in Marlborough, offering his Okaramio property as a venue for our annual "Okaramio Trophy" muzzle-loading shoot and putting up the initial trophy. His contribution to the Branch and National shooting scene within this organisation is well regarded by many.

We were lucky in having National Life Member and Branch Patron, Chub Wood, a youthful 95 year old, on hand to make the presentation even more special for these two treasured members; the applause and approbation were lengthy.

WINGS OVER WAIRARAPA by Phil Cregeen

Held in hot sunny weather on the third weekend in January at Hood Aerodrome in Masterton, this three day event was especially memorable for my wife Pam and me because we took a 30 minute flight in a 1945 Douglas DC 3 Dakota. Other highlights were to see a replica WW I Mk IV tank in action and a world record gathering of 27 Bren gun carriers which included that restored by our own Colin Arnold. And then of course were the excellent flying displays which included WW I fighters, Spitfires, Avro Anson, Harvards, Avenger, Mustang, Kittyhawk, Corsair, DC 3, Yaks, Vampire, Venom, Strikemaster and Albatros. Making its debut was the new Texan II RNZAF pilot trainer and saying farewell was the RNZAF Iroquois which is being replaced by the NH 90 helicopter which was also on display.

Also on display for the first time was an exact replica of Canterbury farmer Richard Pearce's flying machine which he built around the time of the Wright brothers, (1903) although whether he actually made a controlled flight before the Wrights is open to debate.

Kumeu Militaria Show -Update

Hello again friends and supporters

Time is marching by, Our second Show is rapidly approaching, my hair is greyer than last year but we have learnt some great lessons.....

The reality is that we are well on track with more internal and external displays being confirmed every day, and quite a few new people contacting us from word of mouth advertising. Thanks to you, our supporters in setting up this venture.

We are currently finalising our radio advertising, Mediaworks and MoreFM have gotten alongside of us as a sponsor, so you will be hearing more about us on the airwaves, If you see any of the MoreFM Vans on the side of the road, hit them up for a FREE entry ticket!!. Keep your ear open on the Rock too as we also have time-slots with that great radio station.

Clayton and I will also be hitting up print media, putting up posters and signs and talking up a storm (well, one of us....)

Just to remind everyone:

Setup on the Friday 1400-2000 & again on Saturday from 0600-0800

Entrance for setup from Access Road

Friday night all internal areas will be guarded by members of the police.

We have Re-enactors setting up and camping the Friday night, so anyone else that wants to stay onsite the Friday night is welcome, common sense rules apply. There are pay showers onsite tokens can be purchased from me as I wander around.

So AGAIN "Ring Fence" Saturday March 28th, tell your friends and family and we will see you there!

Hopkins and Allen Arms Company By David Jackson

The Hopkins and Allen Company was a U S company manufacturing company formed in 1868 by; Charles W Allen, Charles A Converse, Horace Briggs, Samuel S Hopkins and Charles W Hopkins. The Hopkins brothers managed the day to day running of the plant. In 1874 Converse sold his interest in the company to the brothers William and Milan Hulbert, giving the Hulbert's 50% of the assets and capital. Hopkins and Allen then became the exclusive maker of Merwin and Hulbert revolvers.

Following the bankruptcy of the Hulbert Brothers in 1896, Hopkins and Allen went bankrupt in 1898. The company was reorganised as Hopkins and Allen Manufacturing Company but lost its factory and machinery in a disastrous fire in 1900 and was also the victim of a robbery shortly after when robbers cleaned out the entire warehouse.

Hopkins and Allen rebuilt its factory in 1901 and produced around 40,000 firearms a year. In 1902 They acquired the Forehand and Wadsworth company for whom they had been making firearms under contract. Early in W W 1 they were awarded a contract to build Mauser rifles for the Belgian Army, but this came to nought when the Germans invaded Belgium. Although the company continued to produce firearms, it never recovered financially and went bankrupt in 1916 with Martin –Rockwell purchasing everything in 1917.

Firearms

In addition to Merwin and Hulbert revolvers, Hopkins and Allen made a variety of spur trigger S/A revolvers (Sometimes referred to as Suicide Specials) in .22, .32, and 38 calibres and in a plethora of brand names. For Example....Acme, American Eagle, Bluejacket, Captain Jack, Chichester, Defender, Dictator, Imperial arms, Monarch, Mountain Eagle, Ranger, Tower Police Safety, Universal, and XL.

Later designs being hinged frame double action models. Hopkins and Allen also manufactured revolvers for Forehand and Wadsworth under contract as well as shotguns, rifles and derringers for various sports goods retailers marked with their own house brand.

This revolver is marked XL No 4 and has a Patent date of 1871 with a 3 digit serial No

GENERAL LAWRENCE'S MUSKET

Probably my most prestigious project was the Lawrence's pattern East India Company musket. This came about because salvors on the Goodwin Sands hauled up the remnants of a case of this pattern of musket from the wreck of the E.I.C. ship "Albion" that sank in 1765. The wood being so well preserved that all measurements and stamp details could be recorded along with the mounts which you might observe are basically "India Pattern" but are still pinned. It was the 1st 39" barrel but having a carbine size lock and overall lighter than the "Windus" pattern which on adoption was called by Ordnance "India Pattern. Windus muskets were just like the ordnance copy but bearing E.I. Co. marks of course. (no I'm not Irish) it was made in order to illustrate an outstanding work on the small arms of the Hon East India Company and supplement the photos of the relics from the "Albion" wreck and be used for ballistic tests. Author David Harding provided good photos and drawings and from these I was able to wed a Getz barrel to an Indian made copy of a "Lott" lock which is very close to a government carbine locks. "Our old friend Lott" was how Kit Ravenshear put it but you have to fill up the "Lott" name and scroll chasing. However for "General Lawrence" as we call it after General Stringer Lawrence 1695 - 1775 who's innovative shorter lighter arm for the company's service creation this was, my Cawnpore made lock was best suited (I like to call it Cawnpore, its called Kanpur today but Bombay is now some silly moonbye so its clear Indians have very poor imagination!). the mounts were modified or wood patterns made to cast in yellow brass (I say yellow brass as few brass founders will cast in yellow brass because of the ague causing fumes given off by the ~~max~~ know from just watching a pour that the feeling is very much like that caused by Malaria's fever(my souvenir of West Africa) both brass founders running Cowards brass foundry inside "Cornish Place"works (Dixons old factory) had a head shaking the result of years of running yellow brass. They had no fans and wore handkerchiefs like Jesse onto the pouring, so we worked in a gloom of smoke. But they were in their sixties and had done it all their lives and it hadn't killed them had it?(Reminds me of old Mr. Whitting of Scarlett and Whitting horn scale cutters. He was 90 and still cutting up bone, horn and ivory. I asked him "wasn't he bothered about the dust?" he said "No it just made soup". However it was quite a different story for pearl cutters. I suggested to Cowards "Why not get a youth work scheme to help" they applied and an O.S.H. type rolled up and enquired "Where is the staffs' wash room? They used a bucket and a lump of iron from the fire. Not impressed, "Dinner room?" They sat by the fire. "Extraction fans?" They pointed to the Georgian windows overlooking the river Don. The "O.S.H. man had kittens and left, no work scheme youth. (People want to live for ever nowadays!) Well since I've lived in New Zealand in summer I'd got it started in Nelson, mostly completed in Philadelphia and finished off in David Harding's flat in London then Sheffield. So tight a schedule that some minor finishing touches - a feather spring I think he replaced. That very capable Paul Sawney of High Wycombe had to do it. (at least three snap matchlocks got made that way such was the pattern of my sun following years) but it did get done, even to the London proof which was farcical since the old "flying into sand" ways were long gone. Their proof chamber - now offices but nice touch otherwise. David was on the phone to Grahame Rimer at the Tower who had helped him with examining relic stock and asked him how the project was getting on. "It's done" said David "I'll bring it into show you". When upon he (Mr. Rimer ) very kindly said "It was the best 18c replica he had ever seen" , praise indeed but of course I'm far to modest to 'scite' (you know me!). There is something about 18C British military arms; I've made a 1760 Elliot's carbine, a 1756 Dragon 'home stocked', a 1770 Artillery carbine, two WmIII Dragoon carbines, a 1776 ML Tower rifle, several 'Bess's a blunderbuss and two Tower pistols all with the swells and aprons. Herman Benninghoff once told me that the subtle lines of such arms were very rarely right on original US made copies. I said "Well I do it. "Yes" he said "but your English". A very curious thing if he was right. I do find with very rare exceptions that modern U.S. makers mostly used to long rifle etc. have great difficulty following the little nuances of English gunmaking - say a fowling piece and perhaps a fair parallel might be drawn. Our friend Lynton Mackenzie had a great influence on the U.S. replication of English work. A gentleman name of Alexander lives out west (not Steven Alexander from Canada) he does beautiful work as does Jim Hash of Appomattox VA. I've seen a silver mounted English fowling piece where every part was of Damascus. Clever stuff in anyone's book though hardly typical. Anyway that was the story of general Lawrence's Musket and my humble part in it

MAURICE TAYLOR SHARES HIS VIEWS ON BLACK POWDER AND OTHER PROPELLANTS

Manuscript additions are Maurice's own-Ed

IN DEFENCE OF BLACKPOWDER by Maurice

Well... Such a condemnation of REAL gunpowder by Darren in his last newsletter that I feel I should rally to its defence. Black-powder is really the only fit and proper propellant for guns of any worth the more recent substitutes like cordite, shultz or similar plastic 'powders' are but a palid apology for gunpowder; they're noisier, not particularly safe, decidedly unsportsmanlike and entirely unbecoming to and unworthy of the consideration of a gentleman. They don't smell right; you don't get the sparks and the wholesome smoke. They hardly foul the gun so deprive the unfortunate and misguided user of the pleasure of cleaning them. The 'Apri ski' of the shooting itself! Of course, if you go experimenting with breech loaded systems (a seriously flawed principal in my view) you're obviously of a reckless sort. People of that ilk seem to want to fire off 2 or 3 rounds a minute filling the very air so with holes that are bound to let in ultra violet rays or rain, to the frightful deterioration of the planet (I blame those copper caps) always said that no good would come of copper-caps and other detonators, I mean what's wrong with perfectly good flints? Unless perhaps the cost be objected to, in which case I can convert your guns to matchlock at a price far more cheaper than anything more expensive and I see no immediate shortage of old sash cord so there can be no sensible objection to conversion. However, should some gentleman object on the grounds of rainy days, they can keep the match dry and get a free hair singe, carrying the coal protected under their hats (You just have to carry your marmalade sandwiches in a pocket, that's all!) Of course, if you prefer roast beef as many do, you can contrive to combine sandwich and match-cord and thus get the best use of your hat though if you like an apple afterwards, you might consider more commodious hat. But be careful as you don't want to be frightening horses or persons of a feeble disposition (as such hardware is wont to do this, and you don't want to be doing that, I'm sure) What an ever changing world we live in. Recently I was told of a report of a horseless carriage passing through Tapawera. Its true! I was talking to the man who carries the red flag that proceeds such conveyances. Wonders will never cease.

AND WIVES CAME TOO

Being a member of NZAHAA is not just about collecting guns and going to meetings, gun shows and auctions. There can be opportunities for social gatherings too such as the one hosted by Jan & Barry who put on a spit roast BBQ at their home for Northland members. Barry also had his many toys on display for the blokes and the food provided by Jan was wonderful. Photos taken by Jackie and provided by Grant.

No response to last months questions/ requests for information below

Graham Brimble would like to know what this is, it is about 8 inches long and appears to fire a cartridge:

Can you identify this shell? It is 57 mm diameter and 170mm long and weighs 2.8Kg (6 lb approx) solid steel with a 13mm blind hole of 25mm depth in the base.

My thoughts are it is a 6 pounder Armour Piercing round, but there seem to be a few different types ranging from Nordenfelt to Hotchkiss and more modern guns, so if any one knows for sure I would be pleased to hear from you.

Ships Gunnade on slide carriage - on the veranda of the Museum at Mokau, SH3

The Gunnade is a later form of Carronade, fitted with trunnions instead of the normal under barrel hoop mounting of the Carronade. Introduced into British service in 1779 the Carronade was designed as a short range "smasher" and takes its name from the Carron foundry in Scotland where they were first made. The advantage of these guns was that they used a lot less iron in their casting compared to a similar calibre long gun but could produce similar destruction at short range with a lighter charge behind the ball.

planning our annual run to the South Island sometime in January or February so those South Island people wanting to have items collected please let us know as soon as possible.
Dates to be confirmed but it will be early in the New Year.

North Island Run: Also on the planner is a trip to North Island locations. A date in the new year is being finalised now so we need to know. Contact Steve and talk to him about what you wish to do.

SSANZ PROMOTING FIREARMS SAFETY AND AWARENESS IN THE COMMUNITY

NZAHAA Northland Branch
25 Year Commemorative Publication

LEC 88 (NZ)

A study of the unique New Zealand issue
Lee Enfield Carbine

The Last of the Dustcover Enfields

By

Douglas Munro, John Milligan, Noel Taylor

This in-depth study of the unique New Zealand issue Lee Enfield Carbine has been undertaken by two of our own NZAHAA members, John Milligan and Noel Taylor both from Auckland, together with Doug Munro from Maryland USA. By collecting and analysing data on surviving carbines from around the world they have been able to put together a comprehensive retrospective overview of the carbines that made up this special New Zealand order.

In addition to a detailed analysis of the survey results the book includes a section on shooting the carbine and also its service history, answering the question was it used in the Anglo Boer War.

This book is a must for all owners of the New Zealand issue Lee Enfield Carbine and Lee Enfield enthusiasts.

This special limited edition (300 numbered copies only) is published by NZAHAA Northland Branch to commemorate their 25th Anniversary.

Produced in A4 soft cover format, it has 30 pages of text with 47 colour and 7 b & w images, and is priced at an affordable NZ $ 20 plus $ 5 P & P.
